Alexander Graham Bell invented telephone. He had many other inventions but this one is the most important. He didn't go to school for many years but finally he could finish school. He didn't go to university but he loved his father's job. He was a teacher and helped students that couldn't hear well. When he was twenty years old he was clever and hard-working. And after many failures and successes he invented telephone. This invention is one of the most helpful inventions for people. People can use it and speak with others in other places. At that time he didn't think that people could use this invention everywhere. Cellphone is one of the inventions that become famous after his invention.

Martin Cooper tried to make better telephones and he made a telephone that people can carry. He quit school because of health problems. He invented cellphone in 1973 so people could talk to each other easily. These days many people have cellphone and they can talk more easily, take photos, search the net and do researches with this invention.

You can also invent better things if you study harder.
